“ Al (or Skip, as most people called him) was a man of many talents. He was a strong man, an Army Ranger, who fought in the jungles of Vietnam. He was an Engineer aboard fishing vessels that fished off the waters of Newfoundland and Labrador. He knew all there was to know about fishing and the arts of the waterfront. He built engines and raced cars at the track. He was an avid hunter and loved going to the camp that he and his buddies owned since they were young. He loved dogs and knew how to train them. But most of all, Al was known for his passionate love of horses, especially his Paso Finos. He was an expert rider and he and Elaine would take part in long distance competition rides.

Al had many memories and many experiences in life and I only wish that he would have been able to write them down, so that they would be remembered by others.

Al was liked by all who knew him, and I am thankful that I had the opportunity to daily work side by side with him at Vessel Services where he taught me how to do wire work. I will always remember Al and consider him a friend.

With deepest respect,
